Dear Colleague,

I'm writing to inform you of my candidacy for Vice Chair of our House Republican Conference and respectfully ask for your vote.

Many of you know I'm a strong voice for priorities that will make our country great. But what you may not know is that I've been a fighter my whole life – I was a homeless teen who paid my own way through college (ultimately paying off student debt) before becoming a young mother who fought insurance companies and bureaucratic red tape to get my daughter the surgeries she needed.

Prior to serving in the Trump Administration and the U.S. Congress, I owned a small business and worked as a communications professional, with clients ranging from small businesses to Fortune 500 companies. As Mayor of a top 100 city, I dealt with and successfully reduced illegal immigration, which helped make Irving, Texas one of the five safest cities in America.

As a seasoned communications professional, I've used my time in Congress to message difficult topics and show our policies resonate with the people in our districts – from suburban mothers to seniors, and everyday Americans.

Our Members represent unique areas of this country with vastly different needs. We've discussed and debated topics of the day as well as the deeper challenges facing our nation. As Vice Chair of the Republican Conference, I will work to empower you with winning messages, programs, and highlight how the work we do at home delivers exemplary service for our constituents, while the work we do in D.C. enables a more prosperous and stable future for all of America.

I've made it a priority to ensure those in the 24th District are heard – not just through our legislative work, but also the relentless outreach we conduct across North Texas. Our collaboration back home has produced tremendous results: working with the entire North Texas delegation, we hosted the largest job fair in our region, bringing together members of both parties, and delivering an event with more than 16,000 jobseekers speaking with over 375 businesses. We positively changed people's lives that day!

Our Conference has solutions to counter Biden's harmful policies – from crime to border security to inflation to the weaponization of the federal government.

I hope to use my hard-fought experiences and my professional background to bring a perspective that expands our reach and helps empower more Americans to understand there are better, more prosperous ways to live their lives than what is offered by the Democrats.

I look forward to hearing from you as I work to earn your support.

Sincerely,

Beth Van Duyne
